Motivational Factors. The psychological aspects of sports are more difficult to assess because factors such as motivation are more difficult to measure than the size of an audience or the amount of a contract. The psychological tests that have been administered have produced such a welter of contradictory results that many specialists are ready to abandon the attempt to pinpoint motives. Some generalizations, however, seem tenable. On the whole, physical fitness and the desire for simple relaxation seem to motivate those who shun competitive sports in favour of noncompetitive physical activities such as hiking and recreational swimming.

22- Based on the above passage, it can be said that

1. It is almost impossible to assess the psychological aspects of sports such as motivation
2. Assessing motivation is easier than other factors such as the amount of a contract
3. Measuring the size of an audience is more difficult than assessing psychological factors
4. Assessing psychological factors is more difficult than factors such as the size of an audience

What are the Characteristics of a Coaches Training Program?

Most comprehensive programs recognize that training must be provided for different levels of experience. The first level may be very basic and be oriented towards encouraging individuals to become involved and to be reasonably competent in working with beginners.

Coaches training must relate to three needs- sport specific technical knowledge, coaching theory, and practical experience.

Sport specific knowledge includes subjects such as technique, strategy, and training plans.

Theoretical knowledge includes subject areas such as psychology, physiology, biomechanics, principles of training, athletic injuries, diet, and so on.

Sometimes certification for accomplishing a certain level is important in motivating training, and in identifying accomplishments.

Coaching programs should encourage the development of more coaches, and better coaches.

25- In this passage, to become involved, means to

- | | |
|--------------------------------------|---|
| 1. take part in an activity or event | 2. become uninterested in something |
| 3. try hard to do or get something | 4. make a lot of effort to do something |

26- Subjects such as principles of training and physiology are components of

- | | |
|------------------------------------|--------------------------|
| 1. Sport specific knowledge | 2. Theoretical knowledge |
| 3. Coaching certification programs | 4. Sports psychology |

27- Which one of the following is among the needs that a coaches training program must relate to?

- | | |
|-------------------------|-------------------|
| 1. Coaching theory | 2. Biomechanics |
| 3. Motivating beginners | 4. Accomplishment |

In de Coubertin's view, the Olympic Games were not simply to be an athletic event, but the focal point for a broadly based social movement, which, through the activity of sport and play, would enhance human development and international understanding. More than 160 National Olympic Committees (NOC's) have joined the Olympic Movement. Some are large and others are small; some represent all sports and others represent just those Olympic sports which are practiced in their countries.

28- From the point of view of de Coubertin the Olympic Games were

1. nothing more than athletic events
2. the focal point for a broadly based social movement
3. simply sport and play activities for enhancing human development
4. enhancing human development and international understanding

29- Based on the above passage, it can be said that

1. NOC Stands for National Olympic Classification
2. The Olympic Movement has more than 150 members
3. All members of the Movement must represent the same number of summer and winter sports
4. No member of the Movement represents all sports in the summer and winter Olympic Games

30- The word some in the passage refers to

- | | |
|-------------------------|-----------------------------|
| 1. The Olympic Movement | 2. Summer and winter sports |
| 3. The NOCs | 4. Olympic Games |
